

Affilia, the Journal of Women and Social Work
“Women Creating Change”

Call for Submissions

Affilia, the Journal of Women and Social Work, publishes Women Creating Change, a regular column which focuses on the contributions of women practitioners, activists, advocates, and educators whose work is challenging gender oppression, changing women's lives, and shaping the future of feminism. We encourage a broad interpretation of "women creating change," and we invite submissions of stories that challenge and inspire us as social workers and feminists. Through this column, we seek to bring women's stories that may otherwise go untold to our readers.

We are seeking original, concise submissions such as the following:

- Narratives based on interviews with women creating change locally or globally;
- Accounts of the struggles and successes of particular grassroots women's initiatives;
- First-person accounts linking the personal and the political in practice of all kinds;
- Stories of the creativity, resistance, and change-oriented action of women whose voices have not been heard - young women, older women, poor women, and women consumers of programs and services.

Submissions may be up to six pages, double-spaced, in 12-point font. Send three copies of manuscripts to Miriam Dinerman, editor-in-chief, Affilia, Yeshiva University School of Social Work, 2495 Amsterdam Avenue, New NY 10033. Include your phone number, mailing address, and e-mail address. Direct questions about the column and possible ideas for submission to Christina Gringeri, column editor, College of Social Work, University of Utah, 395 South 1500 East, Salt Lake City, Utah 84112; email: cgringeri@socwk.utah.edu.
